DESCRIPTION

Our ability to conceive and deliver superior digital service is based on the expertise and the processes we have developed this project strategically planning, designing, developing and implementing sophisticated.

There are usually many different people and resources required to bring a project from inception to conclusion.

Coordinating and managing these people, resources and the various processes required to develop successful web sites is an area of strategic focus and differentiation for CST and its web development team.

This section of the proposal describes an approach that we would take to define and document the requirements of the project and develop, test and launch the new site.

Project Steps

All of our projects are organized into four distinct steps, each of which is outlined below.

Step 1: Discovery & Design

All of our projects are organized into four distinct steps, each of which is outlined below. In this step of the project we are primarily interested in working closely with the CLIENT stakeholders to further discover and clearly define the functional and business requirements for the new web site. During this phase of the project we begin to design the site both graphically from a look and feel perspective, as well as architecturally from a technical, database and navigation perspective.

Everything would be documented and agreed upon prior to beginning development. And because CLIENT is intimately involved in these design and discovery meetings, you will have excellent insight as to how things are to progress and most importantly you will be an integral part of the entire design process.

We will also document the following kinds of information (there may be other items to determine):

- 1) The profile of the target audiences
- 2) Define and document the new site map (navigational layout / content organization) of the web site
- 3) Define and document the product catalog categories and sub categories
- 4) Define and document the common and unique attributes of all product categories
- 5) Define and document the work flow associated with
 - i) Home page containing all information of the company.
 - ii) Service page containing the services provided by the company.
 - iii) Our work page containing the work details done by the company.
 - iv) contact us page where customer contact with the company through sending the problem they are facing.

Step 2: Creative & Application Development

In Step 1 of the approach all of the specific requirements for the new web site have been determined.

In Step 2 we engage in two parallel streams of activity.

The first stream is the Creative Development Process where the project team works together to produce two distinct creative design concepts, which are reviewed and critiqued by the CLIENT stakeholders.

These will be further refined by CST designers based on feedback in an iterative and interactive process until a final concept is chosen by the CLIENT.

Once the final design concept is chosen, group member produces all of the required graphics, HTML and CSS templates necessary to build out the entire web site.

The HTML pages (PHP and mysql) are produced.

The second stream is the Development Process where the developer programs all of the functional aspects of the web site and works closely with the group members to integrate the creative with the functionality.

Step 3: System & User Acceptance Testing

In Step 2 the entire web site has been developed based on the requirements discovered and documented in Step 1.

In Step 3 we release the new web site to our internal System for Testing; to validate the application as developed has met all of the requirements as documented in Step 1.
